Q15

Disclosure will reassure the shareholders that the investment is in a viable product that can be expected to sell well. [1]

If U is evasive then the shareholders may be concerned that their money is being spent recklessly on a product that is unlikely to succeed. [1]

Informing the shareholders will also create a sense of transparency and so will help to create trust. [1]

There is a drawback to disclosure because U's competitors will be forewarned that a new product is under development. [1]

Informing the shareholders could lead to the competition being ready to launch a rival product sooner than would otherwise be possible. [1]

[Maximum 5]

[Total 5]

| Commentary: |
| --- |
| The answers to this question were a little vague.Many candidates stated that not giving this information was against the accounting standards and Corporate Governance requirements, this is incorrect.Many candidates went on to make good points about transparency which was good to see. |

© Institute and Faculty of Actuaries